

FAY SICKER

LEARNING SOLUTIONS DESIGN CONSULTANT

Fay has over 20 years' experience working as a learning and development professional in several different industries. Her capability and experience is broad, ranging from strategic and business planning to instructional design and implementation. She has a passion for learning and enjoys creating innovative blended learning solutions that have a measurable effect on both employee motivation and organisational goals. She loves working with others and her track record demonstrates that she can successfully partner with all levels of management across a range of disciplines, both in Australia and abroad.

Fay has extensive experience as both a people leader and a coach. She has been involved in the instructional design and facilitation of a broad range of workshops relevant to leadership development, with a focus on the application of blended learning and change management strategies. Her background in sales and marketing means she often brings a practical view to the programs and projects on which she works.

Prior to joining DeakinPrime, Fay worked for several years as a learning and development manager in a large global organisation before becoming an independent consultant. This gave her the opportunity to work in a range of industries, in organisations such as Telstra, the National Australia Bank, Fairfax Media, Sensis and Eli Lilly. One of the projects in which she was recently involved won the Australian Institute of Training and Development (AITD) Blended Learning Award for 2013.

Fay has an honours degree in Science (University of Melbourne), along with postgraduate qualifications in Human Resources Management (Macquarie University). She is an accredited change management practitioner and holds a Certificate IV in Training and Assessment, as well as certificates in learning design and gamification. She is a certified professional member of the Australian Human Resources Institute, the eLearning Guild and the International Association of Facilitators.
